

Teaching type	Credit hours(3)	Landscape Architecture	course number
face-to-face	pre-requisite or synchronous 703343		703462
This course deals with the study of the human relationship with his environment through the ages, with a focus on the study of the Jordanian environment and its components of plants, as well as studying the principles, elements and theories of coordination, design and planning of the site, in addition to understanding the impact of the environment on site coordination and design through the resulting spatial formation and its relationship to buildings, spaces and elements. As well as, it presents the design idea of the site, understanding the visual perception and the language of the place. It also reviews design and analysis methods and approaches related to site coordination using plants, water, rocks, or the human-designed environment as specialized design environments. Focusing on application through various projects reflecting local concepts and understanding the topic of site coordination as a task and as a specialization that has its requirements, procedures and ways of presentation by means of graphics and others.			