

Overview of the Computer Information Systems Program:

The Computer Information Systems program aims to prepare professionals who possess advanced technical and managerial skills in the fields of information systems and information technology. It equips graduates to design, develop, and manage effective information systems that support organizations across various sectors.