

Overview of the Health Information Systems Program:

The Health Information Systems program aims to prepare specialized graduates in managing and analyzing health information using modern information technology tools. It contributes to improving the quality of healthcare services and supports decision-making in medical institutions.